HUMAN CAPITAL AND EDUCATION IN AGRICULTURE

Protecting the population's subsistence deals with today's emerging problems such as the current global economic crisis, escalating environmental problems, growing social tensions or the rapidly deteriorating global political climate. All of these issues have both direct and indirect effects on agriculture as well. It is obvious that solving such problems is impossible without the active involvement of relevant players. Human capital is therefore crucial to find ways of handling these threats effectively and to fulfil the mission of agriculture, both in terms of production and non-production functions. For this reason, the subject of quality agricultural education is now much more important than ever. Scientific research results must be reflected in the teaching process at all relevant educational institutions, from vocational schools to universities. The broad spectrum of challenges concerning agriculture requires that future agricultural development is managed by erudite experts who will be capable of a comprehensive perspective in their decisions. This year's Agrarian Perspective conference will contribute to the discussion of what is essential for forming agricultural experts and how scientific disciplines from the fields of economics, management, social and natural sciences can contribute to a better understanding of the field, as well as solving problems that face the agricultural industry. Authors are invited to send their abstracts in electronic format via the link ap.pef.czu.cz by 19th March 2023.
